

12 Tips for Learning to Think Innovatively

In today's business world, if you want to progress in your career you have to be an innovator, the type of person who can approach problems creatively, devise solutions to recurring time and resource issues, and figure out better ways to get things done. Otherwise, you need to be good at sleeping with the boss. So, how can you train your brain to innovate without pain? A question for the ages! If it were easy, everyone would be an innovator. Only a fraction of professionals within an organization, however, prove to be innovators.
